Seventy-two years ago Hall was born in the little house at the address given. His relatives died, and then he married, and about two years ago his wife passed away, and since then he had been practically living the life of a hermit. Recently the property was sold, and a big building is to be erected on the site, and that is how the dispossess notice came to be served on Hall. The preliminary notice was served one day last week, and that is the last time he was seen alive.

A doctor who was called in this morning said Hall died last night or this morning and that heart failure was the cause.

Because Nathan Marco, a retired merchant, cut him off with a bequest of only $5 "on account of his unfillal conduct since childhood, which went so far that he even sold the portrait of his mother and myself for 25 cents," Samuel contested the will before Surrogate Beckwith to-day.

The will was made on Aug. 17, and Nathan Marco died thirty-eight days later. He was ninety-three years old, and Samuel, the "bad boy," is seventy! He left an estate of $35,000.
